Using This Bulletin

This bulletin is intended primarily to provide users with Penn State academic information.

To browse the site, use the buttons across the top of the home page. For specific searches, use the search engines on the upper right of the home page or the Site Index (last button in the row across the top of the page).

For course descriptions, click the “University Course Descriptions” button (first on on the left on the home page) or use the Course Description Fast Path search engine on the upper right of the home page.

In the bulletin, the word Program refers to an academic program (majors, minors, and special programs). Search for academic program information by program category (associate or baccalaureate: two-year, four or more years), campus, or college with the buttons and links on the home page, or search for specifics with the site search engines.

The University-wide General Education requirements are explained under that heading on the home page.

Links to offices that may be useful to users are under the "Additional Resources" heading on the home page.

At the upper right edge of the home page, you may access searches for Penn State individual and department directories, link to the Penn State home page, or access another Web browser.

The site follows conventional navigation practices, so once in secondary pages, users should be able to click through to find what they want.

Options for Undergraduate Study

The undergraduate degree programs of the University provide students with opportunities to increase their knowledge and understanding of the world and to grow in their individual skills and capabilities for learning, analyzing, creating, communicating, and forming good judgments. All undergraduate degree programs and courses offered by the colleges and other degree-granting units of the University are under the academic sponsorship of a faculty committed to scholarship and are implemented under the academic policies and student rules established by the University Faculty Senate. They are intended to be flexible in accommodating students interested in learning, whether through traditional or nontraditional offerings, while enrolled on either a part-time or a full-time basis. The degree programs and courses of the colleges and other degree-granting units are offered through resident or distance education. Credit courses are available to degree candidates on University campuses as well as through off-campus credit-granting activities such as internships, practicums, field trips, and foreign studies, as well as via continuing and distance education mechanisms, such as the World Campus. Students not formally admitted to degree candidacy (including provisional and nondegree students) may participate in resident offerings as time and space permit, as well as in continuing and distance education.
University Outreach

Penn State extends the intellectual expertise and resources of the University through teaching, research, and service to address the social, civic, economic, and environmental issues and opportunities of the Commonwealth, nation, and world. Working closely with its colleges, the University delivers outreach programs and services to support the needs of people throughout Pennsylvania and beyond at convenient times and accessible locations.

For information, see www.outreach.psu.edu.
Research

Research—in addition to teaching and public service—is a primary mission of the University. A strong research program strengthens both undergraduate and graduate education by building the body of knowledge and experience on which both are based.

For undergraduate instruction, research brings to the classroom enthusiasm, practical experience, and up-to-date laboratory equipment, as well as opportunities for honors thesis topics and participation in research programs. For graduate programs, research furnishes thesis topics, stipend and tuition support, and experienced faculty to train students as the next generation of researchers. Penn State’s national academic reputation depends greatly on research publications and other scholarly activities of the faculty, whose combined teaching, research, and public service efforts are the hallmarks of a major university.

INVENTIONS AND PATENTS—Patentable discoveries made by University faculty, staff, and graduate students that involve the use of University funds or facilities are the property of the University. Both undergraduate and graduate students fall within the University staff category whenever they are employed in connection with institutional research projects. Patents, with the inventors sharing in the royalties, are administered in the public interest by The Penn State Research Foundation, a nonprofit organization made up of faculty, alumni, industry representatives, and members of the University Board of Trustees. Royalty income is shared between inventor, the organizational unit, and The Penn State Research Foundation. The Penn State Research Foundation’s share is used to foster the advancement of technology transfer and research at the University.

The University Libraries

The University Libraries constitute a major resource for students and researchers in all fields of study. The Libraries, ranked 13th nationally by the Association of Research Libraries, contain more than 4.9 million volumes, 5.2 million microforms, 58,459 serial subscriptions, plus more than 420 databases and 13,700 e-journals—most with full text.

The University Libraries include a central facility and five other libraries at University Park campus, plus libraries at 23 Penn State locations throughout the state, including the Dickinson School of Law and the Milton S. Hershey Center and the Penn State affiliated Pennsylvania College of Technology. At University Park, the Arts and Humanities, Business, Education and Behavioral Sciences, Social Sciences, Maps, Life Sciences, Special Collections, and News and Microforms libraries are maintained in Pattee Library and Paterno Library. Other Libraries at University Park include the Architecture and Landscape Architecture, Earth and Mineral Sciences, Engineering, Law, and Physical and Mathematical Sciences libraries.

In addition Pattee Library houses Course Reserves Services, the Extended Hours Study Area, and Library Services for Persons with Disabilities. The Special Collections Library in Paterno Library includes Historical Collections and Labor Archives, Rare Books and Manuscripts, and the Penn State University Archives.

Among special collections of national importance are those on Arnold Bennett, Kenneth Burke, Jean Giraudoux, John O’Hara, Vance Packard, Joseph Priestley, Conrad Richter; the Allison-Shelley collection of Anglo-Americana-Germanica; and materials on Utopian literature and on Australia. The Historical Collections and Labor Archives contain a wide variety of documentary sources, including the papers of Pennsylvania leaders and businesses and records of labor unions. The most notable of these documents are those of Richard Schweiker, William Scranton, the United Steelworkers of America, and the United Mine Workers of America. The Penn State University Archives house an extensive collection of materials about the University and the surrounding community.

Faculty members may recommend books and other library material purchases by contacting the Libraries directly at libraries@psu.edu or through the faculty member in their department who serves as the library representative. Libraries subject specialists are listed on the Web at http://www.mediatech.libraries.psu.edu/wwk770.

- Faculty at locations other than University Park can also contact their head librarian.

Access to holdings is obtained through The CAT, a computerized catalog, part of the Library Information Access System (LIAS), available on the Web at www.libraries.psu.edu. LIAS is a dynamic, integrated information system that provides electronic access to a great variety of materials in many subject areas.

The Libraries maintain a comprehensive program of general and specialized reference and instructional services. The Libraries' faculty teach credit courses as part of the Library Studies Program and offer a variety of topical seminars. Introductory sessions, offered by the Libraries' Instructional Programs, are scheduled on a regular basis to familiarize faculty, students, and other library users with LIAS. Class sessions designed for specific courses can be arranged in the library to help students learn how to find, use, and evaluate relevant books, articles, Web sites, and other information resources. Assistance is available to help design assignments that use library resources to enhance student research skills and critical thinking. Library instruction rooms (hands-on labs or traditional classrooms) can be reserved for on-site instruction in the use of library resources. For information, go to: www.libraries.psu.edu/instruction/

Penn State holds membership in the Association of Research Libraries, the Research Libraries Group, the Consortium for Institutional Cooperation, and the Online Computer Library Center (OCLC). Participation in these organizations provides faculty and students with access to the collections of more than 2,500 libraries across the United States and internationally, including major research libraries. It is the largest research library in Pennsylvania and one of four resource libraries that provide service and collections to all other libraries and citizens of the Commonwealth.

The publication, Guide to the University Libraries, offers additional information on services and programs and is available at Libraries service desks and by calling (814) 863-4240. More information is also available at www.libraries.psu.edu. Students and others are encouraged to attend the annual Libraries Open House, held each fall semester.

Minimum Requirements for Admission to Degree Candidacy

To be eligible for admission consideration to the University as a degree candidate, either as a beginning student or as a student with advanced standing, an applicant must meet the following minimum requirements:

1. Graduation from an accredited secondary school.
2. Completion of the required units of preparatory work as indicated under the heading of Minimum Secondary School Units Required for Admission Consideration.

A secondary school diploma issued by the Pennsylvania Department of Education, or appropriate authority in another state, may be accepted as equivalent to graduation from an accredited secondary school and as equivalent to the minimum secondary school units required for admission, as indicated under the Minimum Secondary School Units Required for Admission Consideration heading, with the exception of math and foreign language.

The University accepts the definition of a secondary school unit as established by the Carnegie Foundation. A unit represents a year of work in a subject in a preparatory school or secondary school, provided that the work done in that subject is approximately one-fourth of the total amount of work regularly required in a year in the school.

The University reserves the right to deny admission to any applicant for admission for any reason the University determines to be material to the applicant's qualifications to pursue higher education.

Admission to degree candidacy is specified in terms of enrollment in a college or school of the University or in the Division of Undergraduate Studies. Entrance to a major is a subsequent step that normally occurs near the end of the second year of study. Both for admission to a college or school and for entrance to a major, a student must satisfy the requirements of the University, of the particular college or school, and of the major area. In special circumstances, the University may need to further restrict admissions to a college or school and entrance to majors because of space limitations.

Minimum Secondary School Units Required for Admission Consideration

Baccalaureate and Associate Degree Programs

See the minimum number of secondary school units required for admission consideration to a baccalaureate degree program here.

See the minimum number of secondary school units required for admission consideration to an associate degree program can be found here.
First-Year Admission

An applicant for admission as a beginning student in the first-year class must meet the minimum requirements for admission to degree candidacy prior to the time of matriculation. All offers of admission are conditional until these requirements have been met.

Each applicant is evaluated on the basis of the high school record and results of the Scholastic Assessment Test (SAT) or American College Test (ACT). This evaluation produces an evaluation index. Admission decisions are made on the basis of a review of the applicant's evaluation index in relation to the requested area of enrollment (academic program), space availability, the quality of the credentials presented by other applicants, and such other academically relevant information deemed appropriate by the Undergraduate Admissions Office and approved by the Senate Committee on Admission, Records, Scheduling, and Student Aid.

When openings at the requested location or in the requested program of the University are filled, qualified applicants will be offered admission to their alternate choice of program or location or notified of campuses where openings still exist.

COLLEGE ENTRANCE TESTS--Applicants for first-year admission to the University are required to submit scores of the Scholastic Assessment Test (SAT) of the College Entrance Examination Board or the American College Test (ACT). SAT or ACT results of the junior-year testing periods are recommended. Exceptions to the requirement for scholastic assessment test scores will be granted to adult learners who have been out of high school for five or more years or are veterans with four or more years of service. Exceptions to the required courses completed also may be granted. Adults may be requested to submit a statement of personal goals or to participate in an interview.

SELECTION OF THE AREA OF ENROLLMENT--It is necessary for an applicant to indicate one of the academic units of the University in which he or she wants to study. If an applicant is undecided about the choice of an academic unit, he or she may seek enrollment in the Division of Undergraduate Studies.

CHANGING THE AREA OF ENROLLMENT--An applicant who has been admitted to an academic college or unit of the University may not change to another without satisfying entrance requirements of the college or other academic unit of the University to which he or she wants to transfer.

PREVIOUS ATTENDANCE AT ANOTHER COLLEGE--An applicant must state on his or her application whether he or she has ever attended any other college or university. Failure to indicate, at the time of application, previous registration at another college or university may result in refusal or cancellation of admission. An applicant who has attempted fewer than 18 semester credits at another regionally accredited college or university will be considered as a first-year applicant. An applicant who has attempted 18 or more semester credits at another regionally accredited college or university subsequent to high school graduation will be evaluated as an advanced standing applicant.

OBTAINING AN APPLICATION -- The application for admission is available on the Web. Web applications are preferred. A paper application can be obtained as a PDF on the Web site or by writing to the Undergraduate Admissions Office, The Pennsylvania State University, 201 Shields Building, University Park, PA 16802-1294 (telephone: 814 865-5471), or by contacting an admissions officer at any University undergraduate campus.
Advanced Standing (Transfer) Admission

An applicant who has attended any regionally accredited college or institution on the college level and attempted 18 or more semester credits subsequent to high school graduation may be considered for admission with advanced standing. Attendance at any other institution must be reported at the time of application. Failure to indicate, at the time of application, previous registration at another college or university may result in refusal or cancellation of admission.

An applicant for admission with advanced standing must meet the minimum secondary school requirements for admission to degree candidacy prior to the time of matriculation. Advanced standing applicants are considered for admission on the basis of the applicant's requested academic program, space availability, and the academic quality of their work at the previously attended institution(s). A minimum cumulative grade-point average of at least 2.00 (C) out of 4.00, as computed for Penn State students, is required, although certain areas of study may have additional requirements.

In addition, an applicant must be in good academic and nonacademic standing. A student who has not met the entrance requirements or achieved a cumulative grade-point average of 2.00 (on a 4.00 scale) for all graded courses taken at all institutions previously attended, and who has had a four-calendar-year absence from the institution(s), may apply to enroll in credit courses as a provisional student in accordance with Senate Policy 10-00. A student who has had an absence from the institution(s) of fewer than four calendar years, and who has not met the entrance requirements or has achieved a grade-point average of less than 2.00, may apply to enroll in credit courses as a nondegree student in accordance with Senate Policy 14-00.

Advanced standing credits may be awarded for college-level work taken at regionally accredited institutions provided the course grade earned is equivalent to a grade of A, B, or C at this University and the credits are useful to the student's program of study. An academic adviser determines which of the transferable credits are applicable to the program of study at Penn State. Credits are transferred, but grades and grade-point average are not. Advanced standing students enter the University without an average and their average begins with the completion of their first semester of study at Penn State.

Under certain circumstances, the University may need to restrict advanced standing admissions to a particular college or school because of space limitations.

Entrance to a major is an additional step beyond admission to a college or school. It involves additional academic requirements and may be subject to additional restrictions because of space limitations.

APPLICATION PROCEDURE — The application for admission is available on the Web.

Web applications are required for advanced standing applicants.

In all cases where work has been taken at other institutions, an official transcript from each place of attendance must be submitted directly to the Undergraduate Admissions Office by the registrar of the institution attended. An applicant currently attending another institution also must provide a schedule of courses in progress or to be completed before enrollment at Penn State, including course name, number, description, and number of credits. The applicant's secondary school record must be submitted directly to the Undergraduate Admissions Office by the secondary school. The Undergraduate Admissions Office may require the applicant to send a catalog showing the courses that he or she has taken at the college previously attended. All credentials become part of the permanent records of the University.

ENTRANCE TO A MAJOR — An advanced standing degree candidate may be admitted to a college or school of the University. To be eligible for entrance to a major, a student must meet the entrance-to-major requirements of the University, of the college or school, and of the program area. Under certain circumstances, further restrictions or exceptions on entrance to majors may be required because of space limitations. Students are expected to work with advisers and to utilize current information about entrance requirements and restrictions when exploring academic program alternatives and making program and course selections.

CHANGING THE AREA OF ENROLLMENT — An applicant who has been admitted to an academic college, school, or major of the University may not change to another without satisfying entrance requirements of the college/school and major to which he or she wants to transfer.
Provisional Students (Degree Seeking)

An applicant seeking to pursue a degree program and holding a high school diploma or its equivalent but without the criteria required for admission as a degree candidate may enroll at the University as a provisional student. A provisional student may enroll in credit courses if the following criteria are met:

1. The student is making satisfactory progress toward admission as a degree candidate. Progress is satisfactory if a student has completed 18 credits with a minimum cumulative grade-point average of 2.00 (on a 4.00 scale). If a student has completed 18 credits with less than a 2.00, then he or she is given a warning. A student who has completed 27 credits with a cumulative grade-point average of less than 2.00 will not be permitted to enroll as a provisional student in any subsequent semester, unless the student has earned more than a 2.0 grade-point average in the most recently completed semester. No student, regardless of cumulative grade-point average, who has completed 36 credits will be permitted to enroll as a provisional student in any subsequent semester.

2. There is space available after degree candidates have been accommodated.

3. The student has not been dropped for unsatisfactory scholarship from any college or university previously attended. If a provisional applicant attended another college or university and attempted 18 or more semester credits within the last four calendar years, the applicant must have at least a 2.0 (on a 4.0 scale) cumulative collegiate average. However, if it has been four or more calendar years since the applicant attended the other college or university and the cumulative grade-point average is less than 2.0, the applicant is eligible for provisional admission consideration.

4. The student has not been dismissed or suspended for nonacademic reasons from any college or university. An applicant not in good standing at another accredited college or university for disciplinary reasons must consult with the director of the Office of Judicial Affairs for admissions clearance.

NOTE: An applicant holding a baccalaureate degree or higher is not eligible to enroll as a provisional student. The applicant is referred to the graduate nondegree program.

OBTAINING AN APPLICATION--The application for admission is available on the Web. Web applications are preferred. A paper application can be obtained by writing to the Undergraduate Admissions Office, The Pennsylvania State University, 201 Shields Building, University Park, PA 16802-1294 (telephone: 814-865-5471), or by contacting an admissions officer at any University campus.

ADMISSION OF PROVISIONAL STUDENT AS A DEGREE CANDIDATE--A provisional student may apply for admission as a baccalaureate degree candidate with advanced standing to a college or school of the University, or to the Division of Undergraduate Studies, upon completion of at least 18 credits with at least a 2.00 cumulative grade-point average. All these credits must be earned at this University. To be eligible for admission, the provisional student must meet the academic requirements of the University and the college or school that are in effect at the time of application. An applicant who has completed at least the equivalent of two years of baccalaureate degree work before applying for admission as a baccalaureate degree candidate must have the approval of either the dean of the college or school of the University in which enrollment is desired or of the director of the Division of Undergraduate Studies if the student wants to enroll in that division. Under certain circumstances, the University may need to restrict admissions to degree candidacy in a particular college or school because of space limitations. Entrance to a major is an additional step beyond admission to a college or school and further limitations may apply. Provisional students should work with their advisers and utilize current information about college or school and major program academic requirements and restrictions in planning their programs of study toward admission to degree candidacy. After a student is admitted as a degree candidate, the dean of the college or school of enrollment decides which credits earned as a provisional student may be used to fulfill the degree requirements.
Nondegree Students

Any person having received a high school diploma or its equivalent may be permitted to enroll in credit courses (either for credit or audit) at the University. Some of these persons will be classified as nondegree students. A nondegree student who has not been dropped from degree or provisional status by this university or any other college or university for unsatisfactory scholarship will be listed as a nondegree regular student and may enroll in any number of credits not to exceed the typical credit load of a full-time student per semester if criteria 1, 2, and 3 (on the following list) are met.

A nondegree student who has been dropped from degree or provisional status by this university or any other college or university because of unsatisfactory scholarship will be listed as a nondegree conditional student and may enroll in a maximum of 12 credits per semester if criteria 1, 2, 3, and 4 (on the following list) are met.

1. The student has completed the prerequisite for the courses to be scheduled or has obtained permission from the instructor to schedule the course.
2. Space is available after degree candidates and provisional students have been accommodated.
3. The student has not been dismissed or suspended for nonacademic reasons from any college or university. An applicant not in good standing at another college or university for disciplinary reasons must consult the director of the Office of Judicial Affairs for admission clearance.
4. The student has obtained academic advising/counseling from an adviser/counselor designated by the academic unit to which admission, or reinstatement and re-enrollment, is desired.

NOTE: A student must be admitted, or reinstated and re-enrolled, as a degree candidate to apply the credits earned as a nondegree student toward fulfilling the requirements for a degree. The dean of the college or school of enrollment shall decide which credits may be used to fulfill the degree requirements.

OBTAINING AN APPLICATION--A nondegree application can be obtained by contacting the Office of the University Registrar, The Pennsylvania State University, 112 Shields Building, University Park, PA 16802-1292 (telephone: 814-865-6357), or by contacting the Registrar's office at any University location. The form is also available at www.registrar.psu.edu on the Web.

ADMISSION OF NONDEGREE STUDENT AS A DEGREE CANDIDATE--A nondegree student may apply for admission as a baccalaureate degree candidate with advanced standing to a college or school of the University, or to the Division of Undergraduate Studies, upon completion of at least 18 credits earned at this University with at least a 2.00 cumulative grade-point average. An applicant who has completed at least the equivalent of two years of baccalaureate degree work before applying for admission as a baccalaureate degree candidate must have the approval of either the dean of the college or school in which enrollment is desired or of the director of the Division of Undergraduate Studies if the student wants to enroll in that division. To be eligible for degree admission, the nondegree student must meet the academic requirements of the University and the college or school in effect at the time of application. Entrance to a major is an additional step beyond admission. Under certain circumstances, the University may need to restrict admissions to degree candidacy or entrance to particular majors because of space limitations. After a student is admitted as a degree candidate, the dean of the college or school of enrollment decides which credits earned as a nondegree student may be used to fulfill degree requirements.
Re-enrollment

A student who was once admitted and enrolled as a degree candidate and wants to resume study is required to apply for re-enrollment consideration under the conditions specified in Faculty Senate Policy 58-00.

To resume degree candidacy, go to the Office of the University Registrar’s Web site, www.registrar.psu.edu, print off and fill out the Re-enrollment form, and submit it to the campus to which you want to enroll. An application for re-enrollment can also be obtained by writing to the Office of the University Registrar, The Pennsylvania State University, 112 Shields Building, University Park, PA 16802-1292; 814-865-6357, or by contacting the Registrar’s Office at any University location. It is recommended that applications be submitted to the Office of the University Registrar at least one month before registration.
Reinstatement

A student who has been dropped from the University because of unsatisfactory scholarship or who has been dismissed from the University for nonacademic reasons is required to be reinstated in order to resume degree candidacy. To initiate a reinstatement request, go to the Office of the Registrar's Web site, www.registrar.psu.edu, print and fill out the Reinstatement form and Submit it to the campus to which you plan to enroll, or the Office of the University Registrar, The Pennsylvania State University, 112 Shields Building, University Park, PA 16802-1292.
Leave of Absence

A student who is a candidate for an associate or baccalaureate degree may typically apply for a leave of absence for a period not to exceed one year. Under special circumstances, a leave of absence may be approved for a maximum of two years. A student who fulfills the conditions of an approved leave of absence may register upon return without applying for re-enrollment. Once submitted, the leave-time periods are not permitted to be altered. A student is permitted to advance register for the semester in which he or she is returning. An application for leave of absence and additional information can be obtained from the student's college of enrollment and is processed at the college dean's office. The form is also available at www.registrar.psu.edu on the Web.

A student who wants to interrupt study at the University to study at another institution during a semester other than the summer may request a leave of absence for this purpose. It is not necessary to obtain a leave of absence if the period of study at another institution will be limited to the summer and the student returns for the fall semester. A student planning to study elsewhere should consult with his or her academic adviser to determine the applicability of such work to the program of study. In addition, the student should contact the Undergraduate Admissions Office to determine if transfer credit is possible. The student should be cognizant of the University regulations on residence requirements and of any special requirements of the particular major. When courses are completed at another institution and an evaluation for possible transfer credit is desired, an official transcript must be submitted directly to the Undergraduate Admissions Office by the registrar of the other institution. An evaluation fee of $10 is required.
Application of Associate Degree Credits toward a Baccalaureate Degree

Students can begin most Penn State baccalaureate degree programs at any location. Depending on the final choice of major, degree (associate or baccalaureate), and location preference, students may stay at one campus throughout their entire Penn State experience or they may attend one campus for the first two years and then relocate.

Credits received for Penn State associate degree program courses may be applicable to a particular baccalaureate degree program listed in this bulletin at the discretion of the appropriate college and department. For information about offerings at Penn State campuses, see Penn State Degree Programs Summary on the Registrar’s Web site: http://www.registrar.psu.edu/
Opportunities for Credit Acquisition By Examination

THE ADVANCED PLACEMENT PROGRAM OF THE COLLEGE BOARD — The University cooperates with the College Board in this program. Credit may be awarded for Advanced Placement Examinations depending upon the grade earned on the examination and other factors as indicated in the following paragraphs.

A student who does advanced work in high school may take Advanced Placement Examinations that are based on college-level studies. For some examinations, the amount of credit awarded varies with an earned grade of three, four, or five. If credit is awarded, a student's University record will carry notation of credit, but no grade will be recorded. Credit acquired in this manner does not affect a student's grade-point average at the University.

Limitations of credit earned through the Advanced Placement Examinations are as follows: (a) the credit must be useful in a student's program of study; (b) duplicate credit in the same subject is not awarded in any case; and (c) credit may be awarded only to a student who is a candidate for a degree at this University.

General credit may be awarded for an Advanced Placement Examination covering material that is not the substantial equivalent of material covered in a specific University course. General credits may be used to fulfill degree requirements in any area; their use is not necessarily limited to general education or elective requirements. General credits are applied to a student's program of study in accordance with the procedures established by the college or other degree-granting unit of enrollment. Information about the use of general credits or specific course credits earned by Advanced Placement Examinations in individual programs of study may be obtained from a student's academic adviser or from the office of the dean of a student's college.

Undergraduate students interested in receiving credit for Advanced Placement Examinations should arrange for their official grade reports to be sent directly from Educational Testing Service (ETS) to the Undergraduate Admissions Office, The Pennsylvania State University, 201 Shields Building, Box 3000, University Park PA 16804-3000; which is responsible for evaluating such reports and awarding credit.

The schedule of credit awarded for Advanced Placement Examinations may be revised as a result of periodic review by the faculty.

Current information about advanced placement credit awarded by Penn State can be obtained from the Undergraduate Admissions Office, The Pennsylvania State University, 201 Shields Building, Box 3000, University Park PA 16804-3000; 814-865-5471; on the Web: advanced placement opportunities
The College-Level Examination Program of the College Board

The University cooperates with the College Board in this program, referred to as CLEP. Credit may be awarded for the CLEP Examinations depending upon the score earned on the examination and other factors as indicated in the following paragraphs.

An undergraduate student who is a candidate for a degree at the University and who has earned a score equivalent to the fiftieth percentile or higher for performance on a CLEP Examination, taken before or after admission to degree candidacy, may receive credit as indicated in the schedule of credits listed below. The student's University record will carry notation of credit, but no grade will be awarded.

Limitations of credit earned through the CLEP Examinations are as follows: (a) the credit must be useful in a student's program of study; (b) duplicate credit in the same subject is not awarded in any case; and (c) the total number of credits that may be awarded is limited to 60 credits.

General credit may be awarded for a CLEP Examination covering material that is not the substantial equivalent of material covered in a specific University course. General credits may be used to fulfill degree requirements in any area; their use is not necessarily limited to General Education or elective requirements. General credits are applied to a student's program of study in accordance with the procedure established by the college or school of enrollment. Information about the use of general credits or specific course credits earned by CLEP Examinations in individual programs of study can be obtained from a student's academic adviser or from the office of the dean of a student's college or school.

Undergraduate students interested in receiving credit for CLEP Examinations should arrange for their official score reports to be sent directly from Educational Testing Service (ETS) to the Undergraduate Admissions Office, The Pennsylvania State University, 201 Shields Building, Box 3000, University Park, PA 16804-3000, which is responsible for evaluating such reports and awarding credit.

The schedule of credit awarded for CLEP Examinations may be revised as a result of periodic review by the faculty.

Current information about CLEP credit awarded by Penn State can be obtained from the Undergraduate Admissions Office, The Pennsylvania State University, 201 Shields Building, Box 3000, University Park, PA 16804-3000; 814-865-5471. The schedule of credit awarded for CLEP examinations also can be obtained from the Undergraduate Admissions Office on the Web:

College-Level Examination Placement
International Secondary Schooling

Foreign Secondary Schooling — A person who does advanced work in a secondary school in another country may receive consideration for transfer credit when the examinations taken are based on college-level studies.

Credit may be awarded for advanced work in foreign secondary schools. The World Education Series, published by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, shall be used as a guide in making decisions on the awarding of credit for course work completed at an advanced level in foreign secondary schools. The number of credits awarded will reflect the introductory sequence in that subject at Penn State.

Limitations of credit earned through review of advanced level foreign secondary schooling are as follows:

1. (a) the credit must be useful in the student's program of study;
2. (b) duplicate credit in the same subject is not awarded in any case;
3. (c) a student who is not a degree candidate must have enrolled and completed at least one course of three credits or more at Penn State before any credit appears on the student record.

A student interested in receiving credit for advanced-level foreign secondary schooling should arrange for an official grade report to be sent directly from the secondary school or the examining board to the Undergraduate Admissions Office. The Undergraduate Admissions Office is responsible for evaluating such reports and awarding credit.

If credit is awarded, the student's University record carries notation of credits, but no grade is recorded. Credit awarded in this manner does not affect the student's grade-point average at this university.

International Baccalaureate — A person who does work based on college-level studies in an International Baccalaureate program in a secondary school may take the Higher Level examinations. Credit may be awarded for Higher Level examinations of the International Baccalaureate depending upon the grades earned on the examination. Subjects examined at the Higher Level with an earned grade of 5 or higher will be considered for transfer credit. The number of credits awarded will reflect the introductory sequence in that subject at Penn State.

Limitations of credit earned through the Higher Level examinations are as follows:

1. (a) the credit must be useful in the student's program of study;
2. (b) duplicate credit in the same subject is not awarded in any case;
3. (c) a student who is not a degree candidate must have enrolled and completed at least one course of three credits or more at Penn State before any credit appears on the student record.

A student interested in receiving credit for the Higher Level examinations of the International Baccalaureate program should arrange for an official grade report to be sent directly from the secondary school to the Undergraduate Admissions Office. The Undergraduate Admissions Office is responsible for evaluating such reports and awarding credit.

If credit is awarded, the student's University record carries notation of credits, but no grade is recorded. Credit awarded in this manner does not affect the student's grade-point average at this university.
Credit By Examination

In some circumstances credits may be earned through successful completion of comprehensive examinations made available by the Penn State academic units that offer particular courses. When such an examination serves as a substitute for completing all the usual requirements of a Penn State course, the credits received are described as "Credit by Examination" and are accepted as fulfilling degree requirements. Students may initiate a request for Credit by Examination for a course, although the academic department or program offering the course determines whether it will make Credit by Examination available. A grade of "C" or higher must be earned in the examination for such credit to be awarded and to appear on the student’s transcript. Credit by Examination does not result in a quality grade (A, A-, etc.) and is not included in the calculation of the student’s grade point average. Any credits earned in this manner will appear on the student transcript with the notation CRX and without a reported grade. A fee may be assessed to cover the costs of the procedure.
Credit By Portfolio Assessment

A currently enrolled student who can document college-level learning acquired in a non-collegiate setting may be able to petition for undergraduate credit through portfolio assessment. Not all academic units offer portfolio assessment for credit. Students interested in determining whether to pursue credit by portfolio assessment opportunities should contact the academic department responsible for the relevant course.

Criteria for the award of credit via portfolio include:

- Credit is granted for the demonstration of college-level learning obtained during work or other experience, but not for the experience itself. Learning must be documented and must represent college-level achievement. Advisers will provide guidance on the steps necessary to construct a portfolio providing evidence of prior learning that meets academic quality expectations.

- Credit by portfolio assessment does not carry a grade. It may be awarded to enrolled students at the undergraduate level only.

- Credit may not duplicate other coursework that the student has already completed. A student may not enroll for credit subsequently in a course for which credit already has been granted via portfolio assessment.

- Credit may be awarded following an evaluation of the portfolio by an individual faculty member or by a team of faculty members and/or other selected personnel who represent the academic unit in which the subject matter is to be evaluated.

- Credit earned via portfolio is designated on the transcript in the same manner as transfer credit. A fee is assessed to recover portfolio evaluation costs. A maximum of 6 credits may be earned for a single portfolio (course). Associate degree candidates may be awarded a maximum of 16 credits. Baccalaureate degree candidates are limited to a maximum of 30 credits earned by portfolio assessment.
Placement in Mathematics, Chemistry, and English

The First-Year Testing, Consulting, and Advising Program (FTCAP) assists new first-year students in evaluating their educational plans by providing them, prior to initial registration, with a comprehensive program of testing and individualized educational planning and academic advising. The testing component of FTCAP is used for educational planning and academic advising purposes, to determine a student’s appropriate starting levels in mathematics and chemistry course sequences. English composition course placement is determined by the SAT–W score.

Mathematics Placement -- All students will be required to take a mathematics placement examination that includes algebra and trigonometry. This examination is used to place students in college algebra, trigonometry, precalculus, and calculus courses.

Chemistry Placement -- All students who intend to enroll in the general chemistry program are required to take a chemistry placement test to determine their proper starting level. Students who perform satisfactorily on this exam and on the algebra portion of the mathematics placement test are admitted to CHEM 110. Students who do very well on the chemistry placement test may obtain credit for CHEM 110 and CHEM 111 by taking an equivalent of a final exam in CHEM 110 through a mechanism known as credit by examination (http://senate.psu.edu/policies/42-00.html#42-50). A fee is charged for credit by examination and students must achieve a grade of C or better to obtain credit. (Credit by examination is also available for CHEM 112 and 113.) Students who show a deficiency in their chemistry background should enroll in CHEM 108 concurrently with CHEM 110. Those who have not had previous experience in chemistry, or who do poorly on the placement test, will be required to take CHEM 101 or CHEM 106.

English Placement -- Entering first-year students are placed in the composition program based on their demonstrated writing skill as measured by the SAT–Writing exam. Students who do not have SAT–W scores need to consult with an academic adviser to determine appropriate placement. Most students demonstrate adequate preparation and are placed into ENGL 015. Those who demonstrate strong preparation are encouraged to take an honors composition course. Students whose SAT–W scores indicate weakness in their preparation may need to schedule ENGL 004 (Basic Writing Skills) before scheduling ENGL 015. Students enrolled in ENGL 004 or ENGL 015 may also concurrently schedule ENGL 005 (Writing Tutorial), a 1-credit course that offers additional writing support.

Placement Policy for Penn State Foreign Language Courses

All students interested in studying a foreign language at Penn State may choose either to continue the language studied previously or to begin a new one. To continue with a language, students must follow the placement policy as outlined below.

Placement Policy — Students who have studied a foreign language within four years immediately before admission to Penn State may enroll in that language for credit based on the number of Carnegie units prior to admission. (A Carnegie "unit" refers to one course level of a foreign language — French 1, French 2, French 3, etc. — equivalent to one year of study and accredited as such by the school.) If a period of four or more years has elapsed between a student's graduation from high school and admission to college, he/she may be eligible to enroll in level 1 of the language studied in high school.

Students may choose to audit a lower-level course but may not receive credit for it. Students who feel they are qualified for a more advanced course, or students seeking proficiency certification or credit by examination, if available, should contact the appropriate language department for details. For more information, see College of the Liberal Arts policies.

Non-Course Work Knowledge of Foreign Languages — Students who have acquired a knowledge of a foreign language by means other than course work (e.g., family background, travel or study in a foreign country, participation in noncredit summer language programs, etc.) may enroll in elementary and intermediate courses in that language only with permission of the course coordinator or department head. Once students have been placed in a skills course, they may not receive credit for a lower-level skills course.

Students whose native language is not English may not receive credit (through course work or examination) for elementary and intermediate courses in their native language. Enrollment in skills courses beyond intermediate level (e.g., conversation, composition) must be approved by the department head.

Accelerated and Intensive Courses — Students may choose to enroll in accelerated courses such as French 111 and 112, German 011 and 012, or in Penn State's Summer Intensive Language Institute courses. Because the objectives of these courses are somewhat different, students may schedule them for full credit even if they have studied the language previously.

Credit by examination (fee charged), when available, is offered to the extent allowed by the placement policy. For example, a student who has two units of secondary school foreign language and chooses to begin study of that language at the third level instead of the second (Course Level 003, 4 cr.), may receive credits for the second level (Course Level 002, 4 cr.), but not for the first level (Course Level 001, 4 cr.). See the appropriate department for details.

Questions — Questions should be addressed to the course coordinator or department head of the particular language department concerned.

Reserve Officers’ Training Corps

A student may select Reserve Officers’ Training in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Air Force. Subject to the specific requirements of the service chosen, the student selects courses in military, naval, or air science. University credit is given for these courses. In accordance with academic rules, a minimum of 6 credits earned in ROTC courses apply toward graduation requirements in any baccalaureate program. Additional ROTC credits may be applied toward graduation according to the policy of the college or degree-granting unit in which the candidate is enrolled. In many programs, the category to which ROTC credit may be applied is clearly stated. In programs where the category is not predetermined, the student’s adviser and the student decide which credits the ROTC credits will replace. There is no military service obligation during the first year of the program regardless of scholarship status. Sophomore students have no obligation unless they are on a military scholarship.

Residency Classification for Tuition Purposes

PENNSYLVANIA CLASSIFICATION

A student shall be classified as a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes if that student has a Pennsylvania domicile and that student's presence in Pennsylvania is not primarily for educational purposes. Domicile is a person's existing and intended fixed, permanent, and principal place of residence. A student whose presence in the Commonwealth is primarily for educational purposes shall be presumed to be a non-Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes. The following are considerations that may be used by the University in determining whether a student is a resident for tuition purposes:

1. A student under the age of 21 is presumed to have the domicile of his/her parent(s) or legal guardian(s), unless the student has maintained continuous residence in the Commonwealth for other than educational purposes for a period of at least 12 months immediately prior to his/her initial enrollment at The Pennsylvania State University and, the student continues to maintain such separate residence.
2. A student who has resided in the Commonwealth for other than educational purposes for at least a period of 12 months immediately preceding his/her initial enrollment at The Pennsylvania State University is presumed to have a Pennsylvania domicile.
3. A student who has not resided continually in Pennsylvania for a period of 12 months immediately preceding his/her initial enrollment at The Pennsylvania State University is presumed to have a non-Pennsylvania domicile.
4. A student requesting to be classified as a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes must be a citizen of the United States or a permanent resident. Permanent residents must have received the I-551 stamp approving their permanent resident status. An individual in a nonimmigrant status with the USCIS is not eligible for classification as a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes. Other extraordinary circumstances, which may qualify a student as a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes, will be considered on a case-by-case basis.
5. A United States government employee or member of the armed forces who was a resident of Pennsylvania immediately preceding his/her entry into government service and who has continuously maintained Pennsylvania as his/her domicile will be presumed to have a Pennsylvania domicile. Military personnel and their dependents who are assigned to an active duty station in Pennsylvania and who reside in Pennsylvania shall be charged in-state tuition rates.
6. A student receiving a scholarship, guaranteed loan, grant, or other form of financial assistance dependent upon residence in a state other than Pennsylvania is not a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes.

RECLASSIFICATION AS PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENT

A student requesting reclassification as a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that his/her domicile is in Pennsylvania, and that his/her presence in Pennsylvania is not primarily for educational purposes. Each request shall be decided individually on the basis of all facts submitted by the petitioner. Accordingly, it is not possible to list a specific combination of factors or set of circumstances which, if met, would ensure reclassification for tuition purposes.

RECLASSIFICATION PROCEDURE

1. A student may challenge his/her residence classification by filing a written petition with the person or committee designated to consider such challenges at the University. Such person or committee shall consider such petition and render a timely decision that shall constitute an exhaustion of administrative remedies.
2. Any reclassification resulting from a student's challenge or appeal shall be effective at the beginning of the semester or session during which the challenge or appeal was filed or at the beginning of the following semester or session. The decision as to which semester or session becomes the effective date shall rest with the person or committee rendering the decision on reclassification.
3. A student who changes his/her place of residence from Pennsylvania to another state is required to give prompt written notice of this change to the University and shall be considered for reclassification as a non-Pennsylvanian for tuition purposes effective with the date of such change.
4. A dependent resident student whose parent(s) or legal guardian(s) move outside of the Commonwealth may remain a Pennsylvania resident for tuition purposes if he/she continues to maintain a separate domicile within the Commonwealth.

NONRESIDENT STUDENT CLASSIFICATION

1. A student is initially classified as a nonresident based on information provided by the student when applying for admission to the University. The initial classification is made as follows:
   1. Undergraduate Student

      2. All other locations — Dean of the Graduate School
   3. Medical Student

2. Graduate Student
   - Penn State Harrisburg — Penn State Harrisburg Financial Officer
   - All other locations — Residency Appeal Officer, University Park
3. Medical Student
   - Controller, The Milton S. Hershey Medical Center
3. The appropriate University official reviews the students petition and makes a decision.
4. The student may appeal that officer's residency decision to the University Appeals Committee on Residence Classification having representation from the Corporate Controller's Office, Undergraduate Admissions Office, and the Graduate School. The committee's decision on appeal shall be final.

Registration

Dates for advising, registration, and classes are given in the University calendar at http://registrar.psu.edu/academic_calendar/calendar_index.cfm. Registration information for Continuing Education courses is available from the Continuing Education office at each campus or service area. Students with an active University Access Account register through eLion at http://elion.psu.edu. Schedules at campuses other than University Park may vary. Check the Web site for the campus you're interested in for specific schedules.
Grading System

CREDITS--Credits are awarded on the semester-hour basis. The distribution of time between class activities and outside preparation varies from course to course; for the average student, however, at least forty hours of work per semester planned and arranged by the University faculty are required to gain 1 credit.

GRADING SYSTEM

- A, A- (EXCELLENT) Indicates exceptional achievement.
- B+, B, B-, C+ (GOOD) Indicates extensive achievement.
- C, D (SATISFACTORY) Indicates acceptable achievement.
- F (FAILURE) Indicates inadequate achievement necessitating a repetition of the course to secure credit.

The grades of A, A-, B+, B, B-, C+, C, D, and F indicate a gradation in quality from Excellent to Failure and are assigned the following grade-point equivalents:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Grade</th>
<th>Grade-Point Equivalent</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>4.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A-</td>
<td>3.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B+</td>
<td>3.33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
<td>3.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B-</td>
<td>2.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C+</td>
<td>2.33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C</td>
<td>2.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D</td>
<td>1.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>F</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Grade points are determined by multiplying the grade-point equivalent of the grade earned by the number of credits for the subject, for example, ENGL 015 GWS, 3 credits, with a grade of A (grade-point equivalent 4.00) yields 12 grade points.

For further information, see: http://www.registrar.psu.edu/grades/grading_system.cfm
Policies and Rules

It is the responsibility of students to be familiar with the rules, regulations, and procedures of the University. Policies and Rules includes information on academic procedures, code of conduct, general University policies, privacy rights of students, and responsibilities for community living. Paper copies of Policies and Rules are available from the information desk in the HUB-Robeson Center and from each college dean's office at University Park campus and the Office of Student Affairs at other campuses. University policies are available online at studentaffairs.psu.edu/judicial.

For academic policies and rules, see http://www senate.psu.edu/policies.
Requirements for Graduation

To graduate, a candidate must complete the course requirements for the candidate's major and:

1. earn at least a C (2.00) cumulative grade-point average for all courses taken at the University;
2. earn at least a C grade in each major course designated by the major as a C-required course.
Residence Required for Degree

Every candidate for a degree shall earn as a degree candidate at least 36 of the last 60 credits for a baccalaureate degree and at least 18 of the last 30 credits for an associate degree in courses offered by the University or in cooperative degree programs established by formal agreement and approved by the University Faculty Senate.

A candidate for a first baccalaureate degree shall earn the last 60 credits required for that degree within five calendar years. An extension of time shall be granted for intervening military service.

A course schedule, including courses offered by resident education or Continuing Education, is made by each student.

A typical credit load for a full-time student is defined to be from 12 to 19 credits per semester. Students are not permitted to advance register or register in the normal registration period for more than 19 credits. Students are permitted to add courses beyond this maximum 19 credits after consultation with the adviser during the first ten calendar days of the semester.
Planning a Degree Program

Primary responsibility for the successful completion of a degree program lies with the student. The key to meeting this responsibility is personal involvement in academic program planning. To plan a program of study that will best meet individual goals and interests, students must know the requirements and restrictions of the department, college or other degree-granting unit, and the University; know the sources of academic information; work closely with an adviser in examining programs and course requirements and alternatives; and consult the Undergraduate Degree Programs Bulletin.

The University comprises a family of campuses located throughout the Commonwealth (see http://www.psu.edu/ur/cmpcoll.htm). For most degree programs, a student may begin his or her studies at any one of the campuses. More than 160 baccalaureate majors, more than 25 associate degree majors, and more than 7,000 undergraduate courses are offered by the University. Clearly, each campus cannot offer every academic program or every course. As a result, admission to several academic programs is restricted, and students selecting these programs may be required to begin their studies at a specified campus. In other cases, admission to certain academic programs must be approved when a first-year student enters the University; transfer into these programs at a later point in a student's career is not possible. For these reasons, it is imperative that a student understand both program and course limitations at the campus of enrollment.

The many programs at Penn State allow varying degrees of flexibility. An early decision to pursue a highly structured program enables the student to complete the program in the optimum length of time by taking the required courses in a sequence that allows the smoothest progression from one level to the next. Even the most regulated programs, however, allow choices within given boundaries. Other programs allow a considerable range of choices in the completion of the requirements. Students should be aware of possible difficulties in transferring from a flexible program to a more highly structured program. Whether a program is highly structured or quite flexible, it is extremely important that the student understand program requirements when enrolling in the University.

Information concerning the University, its academic programs, course offerings, campuses, and academic organization is available from the following sources:

FIRST-YEAR TESTING, CONSULTING, AND ADVISING PROGRAM--First-year students entering Penn State are scheduled, through the Division of Undergraduate Studies, for a comprehensive testing and advising program that provides an overview of the academic opportunities and activities available to students. The First-Year Testing, Consulting, and Advising (http://www.psu.edu/dus/ftcap.htm) program also provides individual educational planning interviews in which students may discuss their abilities and interests in terms of Penn State programs.

INFORMATION FOR NEW STUDENTS--The Office for Communication provides first-year students as well as advanced standing and change-of-assignment students at the University Park campus with comprehensive information regarding the essential academic and student development opportunities of the campus and the University in general beginning with a new student's acceptance to a campus and continuing through completion of his/her first semester.

Through programs offered in cooperation with the colleges' academic units and various student service operations, new students are introduced to the intellectual and scholarly expectations of the University, to the skills needed for advanced study and lifelong learning, and to the student development opportunities with academic merit. In addition, this office helps inform students of the required procedures for matriculation and offers a perspective on college life, including practical information about important dates, times, and locations (e.g., arrival day, first day of classes, course drop/add). During arrival week each semester, new students receive instruction and advice about their courses of study, including help with registration and class schedule adjustments, and they participate in special activities.

ACADEMIC ADVISERS--Each student is assigned a primary academic adviser in his or her college, school, or the Division of Undergraduate Studies. Students can find their adviser's name and contacts information using the Adviser Information application on eLion (http://www.elion.psu.edu). The adviser is available to help a student plan an academic program, schedule each semester's courses, and provide information about majors. The adviser will also refer a student to other appropriate sources of information.

ACADEMIC ADVISING CENTERS--Academic advising centers are located in every college at University Park and at all other Penn State undergraduate locations. Centers provide advising and information about academic programs. Lists of University Park centers and centers at other locations are available online. University Park: http://www.psu.edu/dus/handbook/upinfo.html; other locations: http://www.psu.edu/dus/handbook/cesinfo2.html.

WEB SITES--Penn State's home page, http://www.psu.edu, provides information on the University and each of its colleges.

SCHEDULE OF COURSES--Course offering and registration information is available on the Web at http://www.registrar.psu.edu. The Schedule of Courses information is updated once each day and provides current information about the courses being offered at all Penn State campuses.
Academic Definitions

The following definitions, referring to degrees, majors, options, minors, and concurrent or sequential majors programs, have been adopted by the University Faculty Senate:

Associate Degree--Two-year majors that, with a few exceptions, provide concentrated instruction to prepare graduates for specialized occupational assignments.

Baccalaureate Degree--An award signifying a rank or level of educational attainment. Particular types of baccalaureate degrees identify educational programs having common objectives and requirements. Degree programs may provide academic, preprofessional, or professional experiences and preparation. Majors lead to a baccalaureate degree. Each student must select a major within a baccalaureate degree type. If options are offered within a major, a student selects one. The student may also elect to enroll in a minor to supplement the major. Alternatively, the student may seek to enroll in multiple majors within the same type of baccalaureate degree or to enroll in a simultaneous degree program. A baccalaureate program of study shall consist of no less than 120 credits. Students may elect to take courses beyond the minimum requirements of a degree program.

Major--A plan of study in a field of concentration within a type of baccalaureate degree. Colleges and other degree-granting units may have common requirements for all of their majors. Each major may have requirements identified in Prescribed, Additional, and Supporting Courses and Related Areas categories. Elective credits are not considered part of the major. (Senate Record:1/23/90, Appendix IV)

Option--A specialization within a major that should involve at least one-third of the course work credits required for the major, but need not be more than 18 credits. All options within a major must have in common at least one-fourth of the required course work credits in the major. A student can only be enrolled in an option within his/her own major.

Minor--A minor is defined as an academic program of at least 18 credits that supplements a major. A minor program may consist of course work in a single area or from several disciplines, with at least 6 but ordinarily not more than half of the credits at the 400 course level. Total requirements are to be specified and generally limited to 18 to 21 credits. Entrance to some minors may require the completion of a number of prerequisites, including courses, portfolios, auditions, or other forms of documentation that are not included in the total requirements for the minor. All courses for a minor require a grade of C or above.

Concurrent and Sequential Majors Programs--At the baccalaureate or associate degree level, students may be approved for admission to more than one major under the Concurrent Majors Program. A Concurrent Majors Program is one in which students take courses to concurrently meet the requirements of at least two majors, with graduation for all majors in the program occurring during the same semester. Concurrent majors must all be at the baccalaureate or associate degree level. Under the Sequential Majors Program, upon graduation from an associate or baccalaureate degree program, a student may apply for re-enrollment in another undergraduate degree program.

Baccalaureate Degrees Granted

Undergraduate majors offered at Penn State lead to one or more of the following baccalaureate degrees: Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Architectural Engineering (five-year program), Bachelor of Architecture (five-year program), Bachelor of Design, Bachelor of Fine Arts, Bachelor of Humanities, Bachelor of Landscape Architecture (five-year program), Bachelor of Music, Bachelor of Musical Arts, and Bachelor of Philosophy. Not all degrees are offered at every location. Baccalaureate degrees offered at Penn State include both those that are designed to provide an academic (including preprofessional) experience and those that are specifically designed to provide professional preparation. To ensure excellence, all professionally oriented degree majors provide a strong academic base. The Bachelor of Arts degree (with a given major) is an academic degree; the Bachelor of Science degree (with a given major) and the bachelor's degree in any subject area (e.g., Bachelor of Architecture) are professional degrees. The Bachelor of Philosophy degree, described in the Intercollege Undergraduate Programs section of this bulletin, is planned individually and may be designed to serve either academic or professional purposes.

BACHELOR OF ARTS-- See Bachelor of Arts Degree Requirements.

BACHELOR OF HUMANITIES--Bachelor of Humanities degree majors are required to take 18 credits (referenced below). In addition, students are expected to complete credits required by their college and major.

WHAT IS GENERAL EDUCATION?

The inclusion of General Education in every degree program reflects Penn State's deep conviction that successful, satisfying lives require a wide range of skills and knowledge. These skills include the ability to reason logically and quantitatively and to communicate effectively; an understanding of the sciences that makes sense of the natural environment; a familiarity with the cultural movements that have shaped societies and their values; and an appreciation for the enduring arts that express, inspire, and continually change these values. General Education, in essence, augments and rounds out the specialized training students receive in their majors and aims to cultivate a knowledgeable, informed, literate human being.

Penn State's General Education program is designed to enable students to:

- acquire knowledge through critical information gathering, including reading and listening, computer-assisted searching, and scientific experimentation and observation;
- analyze and evaluate, where appropriate in a quantitative manner, the acquired knowledge;
- integrate knowledge from a variety of sources and fields;
- make critical judgments in a logical and rational manner;
- develop the skills to maintain health and understand the factors that impinge upon it;
- communicate effectively, both in writing and orally, and using the accepted methods for presentation, organization, and debate particular to their disciplines;
- seek and share knowledge, independently and in collaboration with others;
- gain understanding of international interdependence and cultural diversity and develop consideration for values, lifestyles, and traditions that may differ from their own;
- comprehend the role of aesthetic and creative activities expressing both imagination and experience.

Courses within the structure of General Education become an integral part of the overall educational experience. These courses may be relevant to a major or to an individual's interests. Students are encouraged to consider how a course might be useful to their current interests and goals. An important part of academic planning is working with an academic adviser not only to understand the role of General Education requirements, but also to make sure that course selections complement the academic requirements of a student's specific major.

Components of General Education

The typical baccalaureate Penn State academic program requires the completion of between 120 and 130 credits. The General Education requirements are common to all degree programs and compose about one-third of the course work (45 credits). All students must also complete a writing-across-the-curriculum course as part of their degree program. For simplicity, those courses are included with the General Education program as described in this bulletin. The course selections are designed to provide students with a well-rounded academic experience within an integrated curriculum that allows for individual flexibility. The components of the program are:

- Skills courses that help develop quantitative and communication skills.
- Studies in the Knowledge Domains of the Arts, Humanities, and the Sciences (including the Health Sciences, Natural Sciences, and the Social and Behavioral Sciences) that provide a broad overview of the world in which we live.
- First-Year Seminars (FYS) that help introduce students to the scholarly community of the University.
- Writing Intensive courses of the "Writing Across the Curriculum" component that further enhance writing skills.
- United States Cultures and International Cultures that provide opportunities to increase understanding of the relationship between people of different cultures and widen international perspective.

General Education Requirement Descriptions

SKILLS

Writing / Speaking

_Courses with the GWS designation satisfy this component._

It is the objective of these courses to teach students to communicate information clearly and set forth their beliefs persuasively both orally and in writing. In particular, it is expected that students become sufficiently proficient in writing, such that their expository prose meets the expectations of educated readers in both form and style.

Quantification

_Courses with the GQ designation satisfy this component._

The objective of the quantification courses is to teach the students to work with numbers so as to measure space, time, mass, forces, and probabilities; to reason quantitatively; and to apply basic mathematical processes to daily work and everyday living.

KNOWLEDGE DOMAINS

Health and Physical Activity

_Courses with the GHA designation satisfy this component._

Courses in the Health and Physical Activity area focus on the theory and practice of life span wellness and fitness activities, and on the knowledge, attitudes, habits, and skills needed to live well. The courses include such diverse topics as diet, exercise, stress management, the wise use of leisure time, alcohol consumption and drug use, sexual health awareness, and safety education. Courses may be knowledge-focused (about aspects of the biological, social, and behavioral aspects of healthful living) or practice-focused (emphasize attitudes, habits, and skills needed to engage in healthful living and can include traditional dance, exercise, and sport activity classes) or integrated in any manner.

Natural Sciences

Courses with the GN designation satisfy this component

The Natural Sciences reveal the order, diversity, and beauty of nature and in so doing enable students to develop a greater appreciation of the world around them. These courses help students to understand the nature of science through exposure to the broad divisions of science--physical science, biological science, earth science, and applied natural science. In these courses the students will be taught how to acquire scientific factual information, to use scientific methodology and to develop an appreciation of the natural world. Students should gain an understanding of how scientists reason and how they draw conclusions and think critically.

Arts

Courses with the GA designation satisfy this component

Courses taught in the area of the Arts are expected to help students understand and appreciate some of the more important creative works, traditions, literature, and history of the arts and architecture. General Education Arts courses aim to teach students to recognize the comprehensive role of arts and architecture as an expression of the cultural values of a society and the need to preserve these expressions for the benefit of future generations.

Through the courses in the Arts area, students should recognize aesthetic values as an integral part of society's essential need and gain lifelong benefits through the acquisition and appreciation of arts-related skills. Students should become conversant with the terminology, techniques, attitudes, ideas, and skills that the arts comprise so as to understand how humankind relates to the arts.

Humanities

Courses with the GH designation satisfy this component

Humanistic studies are divided into four categories:

1. (1) literature,
2. (2) history and culture,
3. (3) advanced language, and
4. (4) philosophy.

The study of the Humanities should develop competency in interpretive understanding of the human condition and of the values inherent in it. This interpretive understanding should evolve into the development of insights and a critical evaluation of the meaning of life, in its everyday details as well as in its historical and universal dimensions. Through this development students should acquire knowledge of and concern for the humanistic values that motivate and inform all humanistic studies.

Social and Behavioral Sciences

Courses with the GS designation satisfy this component

Social and Behavioral Sciences courses develop students' understanding of the diverse personal, interpersonal, and societal forces that shape people's lives and teach them how to approach these subjects through the concepts, principles, and methods of scientific inquiry. The general goal is a theoretical understanding of the interrelationships of the determinants of the organization of human behavior. These courses are expected to introduce students to the scientific analysis of:

1. (1) the forms, practices, and theories of politics;
2. (2) the nature and operation of economic analysis;
3. (3) the interrelationships of social institutions;
4. (4) the dynamics of individual and group behavior and change; and
5. (5) the processes and functions of human communication.

Through the application of the methodologies of the Social and Behavioral Sciences, students should develop an understanding of the multiple nature of causality in social settings. The Social and Behavioral Sciences require a comprehensive, integrative, empirical, and theoretical view of the social world.

Note: Some colleges or majors might require the completion of specific GWS, GQ, GHA, GN, GA, GH, and/or GS courses.

ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS

First-Year Seminar

Courses with the suffix S, T, or X or PSU abbreviation satisfy this requirement

The First-Year Seminars (FYS) are designed to engage students in learning, acquaint them with the learning tools and resources available at Penn State and orient them to the scholarly community from the outset of their undergraduate studies in a way that will bridge to later experiences in their chosen majors. In addition, the FYS facilitate students' adjustment to the high expectations, demanding workload, increased academic liberties, and other aspects of the transition to college life and introduce them to their responsibilities as members of the University community. The seminars are taught by full-time, regular Penn State faculty and, as the name implies, are conducted in small sections, thus providing opportunities for students to develop relationships with full-time faculty and other students in academic areas of interest to them.

Each baccalaureate student must complete at least 1 credit of the First-Year Seminar. Some colleges may, however, call for the completion of more than 1 credit of the FYS. Students will typically enroll in the FYS offered by the college in which they plan to graduate. If a student changes his/her college of enrollment, it is not necessary to retake the FYS offered by the new college.

Not all seminars are available at all Penn State campuses and some enrollment restrictions apply. Associate degree students are strongly encouraged to complete the FYS requirement even though they are not required to do so.

NOTE: Beginning with the 2009 summer session, the First-Year Seminar requirement will be replaced by First-Year Engagement requirements for each University Park academic college, each of the nineteen Commonwealth campuses, and the Division of Undergraduate Studies. Students at the University Park campus will be required to complete at least 1 credit of first-year seminar and meet any other first-year requirements specified by their home college. Students at the Commonwealth campuses will be required to complete the first-year experiences specified by their campus. First-year students entering Penn State in summer 2009 and thereafter should consult their enrollment home for these requirements.

United States Cultures
Courses with the US designation satisfy this requirement

A course that fulfills the United States Cultures requirement must strive to increase students' understanding of contemporary United States society. Such a course need not focus exclusively on the present and may concern a historical subject.

Courses with the United States Cultures designation will include two or more of the following components and will include those components in the graded evaluation of student performance:

1. Cultivate student knowledge of issues of social identity such as ethnicity, race, class, religion, gender, physical/mental disability, age, or sexual orientation;
2. Convey to students knowledge of different United States values, traditions, beliefs, and customs;
3. Increase student knowledge of the range of United States cultural achievements and human conditions through time;
4. Increase student knowledge of United States social identities not in isolation, but in relation to one another (for example, the interaction of race or gender with socioeconomic status).

International Cultures
Courses with the IL designation satisfy this requirement

A course that fulfills the International Cultures requirement must strive to increase student knowledge of the variety of international societies and may deal to some extent with U.S. culture in its international connections. It need not focus exclusively on the present and may, indeed, be a historical subject. Courses with the International Cultures designation will do two or more of the following:

1. Cultivate student knowledge of the similarities and differences among international cultures;
2. Convey to students knowledge of other nations' cultural values, traditions, beliefs, and customs;
3. Increase students' knowledge of the range of international cultural achievements and human conditions through time;
4. Increase students' knowledge of nations and cultures not in isolation, but in relation to one another.

Writing Across the Curriculum
Courses with the suffix W, M, X, or Y satisfy this requirement

Developing the skill to communicate by means of the written word is extremely important. Courses other than General Education English composition courses emphasize the ability of students to write. Colleges and/or departments have established "W" courses in specific programs. Students are required to complete at least 3 credits of writing-intensive courses offered within their major or college of enrollment.

Typically, "W" courses include writing assignments that relate clearly to the course objectives and serve as effective instruments for learning the subject matter of the course. In writing-intensive courses, assignments are designed to help students investigate the course subject matter, gain experience in interpreting data or the results of research, shape writing for a particular audience, or practice the type of writing associated with a given profession or discipline.

Opportunities for students to receive written feedback from the instructor and to apply the instructor's feedback to their future writing are built into the writing courses. A writing-intensive course may also include peer review of written work, tutorial assistance, instructor conferences, group writing projects, the use of writing or learning centers, teaching assistant feedback, and classroom discussions of assigned readings about writing.

Courses that are designed to develop the students' writing competence are identified by the suffix "W, M, X, or Y" in the Undergraduate Bulletin and the Schedule of Courses. Both baccalaureate and associate degree students complete 3 credits in this area.
Program Structure--Baccalaureate and Associate

The Baccalaureate Degree General Education Program

The baccalaureate degree General Education program consists of 45 credits that are distributed among two General Education components: (1) Skills (15 credits) and (2) Knowledge Domains (30 credits) in the Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, Social and Behavioral Sciences, and Health and Physical Activity. Every baccalaureate degree student also completes the First-Year Seminar, United States Cultures and International Cultures, and Writing Across the Curriculum requirements.

A restriction is placed on students in majors that are closely linked to the Knowledge Domains of Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, and Social and Behavioral Sciences to ensure that they participate in the full breadth of General Education. These students may not use a course in their academic major to satisfy one of the Knowledge Domains requirements. For example, an Economics major may not use an economics course to fulfill his/her social and behavioral sciences requirement. Also, students may not count courses cross-listed with courses in their major to fulfill one of the General Education Knowledge Domain, e.g., a Theatre major may not register for THEA 208 (GA;US;IL)/AAAS 208 (GA;US;IL) and have it count in the Arts requirement.

SKILLS (15 credits)

Writing/Speaking (9 credits)
Courses with the GWS designation satisfy this component.

Quantification (6 credits)
Courses with the GQ designation satisfy this component. (3-6 credits are selected from mathematics, applied mathematics, and statistics; 3 credits may be selected from computer science or symbolic logic.)

KNOWLEDGE DOMAINS (30 credits)

Health and Physical Activity (3 credits)
Courses with the GHA designation satisfy this component.

Natural Sciences (9 credits)
Courses with the GN designation satisfy this component.

Arts (6 credits)
Courses with the GA designation satisfy this component.

Humanities (6 credits)
Courses with the GH designation satisfy this component.

Social and Behavioral Sciences (6 credits)
Courses with the GS designation satisfy this component.

ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS

Baccalaureate degree students must complete one First-Year Seminar (S, T, or X suffix, or PSU abbreviation), 3 credits of United States Cultures (US) and 3 credits of International Cultures (IL), and 3 credits of Writing Across the Curriculum (W, M, X, and Y). These requirements may be completed by designated courses that also meet other degree or General Education requirements.

FLEXIBILITY OF THE BACCALAUREATE DEGREE GENERAL EDUCATION REQUIREMENTS

Penn State wants students to use General Education to experiment and explore, to take academic risks, to discover things they did not know before, and to learn to do things they have not done before. To that end, the General Education program extends the concept of flexibility to all aspects of the degree program.

Students may, with the permission of their adviser and dean's representative:

1. substitute a 200- to 499-level course in an area of General Education for a course found on the General Education list. For example, a student may take a 400-level course in history and use it to meet the General Education requirement satisfied by a comparable lower-level history course.

2. substitute a foreign language at the twelfth credit level of proficiency, as measured by the Penn State foreign language offerings, for 3 credits in any of the categories of General Education. Baccalaureate degree students may substitute study in a foreign/second language at the twelfth credit level of proficiency or higher for any three credits in any of the categories of general education only if those three credits are in language study beyond their degree requirements.*

3. substitute a third course in one of the Knowledge Domains areas of Arts, Humanities, or Social and Behavioral Sciences for a second course in one of the other areas. For example, a student might take 3 courses in the Arts, two courses in the Humanities, and only one course in the Social and Behavioral Sciences. This substitution is often referred to as the 9-6-3 sequence, representing the 9 credits, 6 credits, and 3 credits completed in place of the specified 6-6-6.*

4. meet the United States Cultures (US) and International Cultures (IL) requirement through completion of an...
experiential learning program or practicum (one-semester or year long) approved by their college dean's office. Approved Penn State Education Abroad Programs may be used to satisfy the International Cultures (IL) requirement.

5. meet the First-Year Seminar (FYS) requirement through completion of a FYS course offered by any unit of the University. Thus, a student who successfully completes a FYS course in one college, prior to transferring to another college, will not be required to complete another FYS. However, since there are various modes of offering a FYS throughout the University, students transferring to a new college may find that a required course that is also a FYS must still be taken.

*Please note: The use of these two substitutions (No. 2 and No. 3 above), either alone or in combination, may not lead to the complete elimination of any area in the skills or knowledge domains categories in the student’s General Education program.

* Three credits of United States Cultures (US) and International Cultures (IL), and 3 credits of Writing Across the Curriculum (W, M, X, and Y) may be designated courses that also meet other degree or General Education requirements.

The Associate Degree General Education Program

The associate degree General Education program consists of 21 credits that are distributed among two General Education components: (1) Skills 6 credits in courses that develop communicative and quantitative skills; and (2) Knowledge Domains 12 credits in the Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, and Social and Behavioral Sciences, with an additional 3 credits in any General Education area. Associate degree students have a 3-credit requirement and may choose either a United States Cultures (US) course or an International Cultures (IL) course, and must complete a 3-credit writing intensive course (W). While associate degree students are not required to complete a First-Year Seminar, they are encouraged to participate in such a seminar if the opportunity to do so exists.

A restriction is placed on students in majors that are closely linked to the Knowledge Domains areas of Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, and Social and Behavioral Sciences, in order to ensure that they participate in the full breadth of General Education. These students may not use a course in their academic major to satisfy one of the Knowledge Domains area requirements. For example, an Economics major may not use an economics course to fulfill his/her social and behavioral sciences requirement.

SKILLS (6 credits)

Writing/Speaking (3 credits)
Courses with the GWS designation satisfy this component.

Quantification (3 credits)
Courses with the GQ designation satisfy this component. (3 credits are selected from mathematics, applied mathematics, statistics, computer science, or symbolic logic)

KNOWLEDGE DOMAINS (12 credits)

Natural Sciences (3 credits)
Courses with the GN designation satisfy this component.

Arts (3 credits)
Courses with the GA designation satisfy this component.

Humanities (3 credits)
Courses with the GH designation satisfy this component.

Social and Behavioral Sciences (3 credits)
Courses with the GS designation satisfy this component.

SKILLS OR KNOWLEDGE DOMAINS (3 credits)

Any General Education course can be taken to satisfy these 3 credits.

ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS

Every associate degree student will also complete, as part of his or her additional associate degree requirements, 3 credits of United States Cultures (US) or 3 credits of International Cultures (IL) and 3 credits of Writing Across the Curriculum (M, W, Y, and X) requirements.

Flexibility of the Associate Degree General Education Requirements

The General Education program extends the concept of flexibility to all aspects of the degree program. Penn State wants students to use General Education as an opportunity to experiment and explore, to take academic risks, to discover things they did not know before, and to learn to do things they have not done before.

To these ends, students may, with the permission of their adviser and dean's representative:

1. substitute a 200- to 499-level course for an Arts, Humanities, Natural Sciences, or Social and Behavioral Sciences course found on the General Education list. For example, a student may take a 400-level course in history and use it to meet the General Education requirement satisfied by a comparable lower level history course.

2. meet the United States Cultures (US) and International Cultures (IL) requirement through completion of an experiential learning program or practicum (one-semester or year long) approved by their college dean's office. Approved Penn State Education Abroad Programs may be used to satisfy the International Cultures (IL) requirement.

3. Three credits of the required 21 credits of General Education courses are to be selected from any of the following General Education areas: Writing/Speaking, Quantification, Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, or Social and...

To that end, the General Education program extends the concept of flexibility to all aspects of the degree program.

Students may, with the permission of their adviser and dean’s representative:

1. Substitute a 200- to 499-level course in an area of General Education for a course found on the General Education list. For example, a student may take a 400-level course in history and use it to meet the General Education requirement satisfied by a comparable lower-level history course.

2. Substitute a foreign language at the twelfth credit level of proficiency, as measured by the Penn State foreign language offerings, for 3 credits in any of the categories of General Education. Baccalaureate degree students may substitute study in a foreign/second language at the twelfth credit level of proficiency or higher for any three credits in any of the categories of general education only if those three credits are in language study beyond their degree requirements.*

3. Substitute a third course in one of the Knowledge Domains areas of Arts, Humanities, or Social and Behavioral Sciences for a second course in one of the other areas. For example, a student might take 3 courses in the Arts, two courses in the Humanities, and only one course in the Social and Behavioral Sciences. This substitution is often referred to as the 9-6-3 sequence, representing the 9 credits, 6 credits, and 3 credits completed in place of the specified 6-6-6.*

4. Meet the United States Cultures (US) and International Cultures (IL) requirement through completion of an experiential learning program or practicum (one-semester or year long) approved by their College Dean’s Office. Approved Penn State Education Abroad Programs may be used to satisfy the International Cultures (IL) requirement.

5. Meet the First-Year Seminar (FYS) requirement through completion of a FYS course offered by any unit of the University. Thus, a student who successfully completes a FYS course in one college, prior to transferring to another college, will not be required to complete another FYS. However, since there are various modes of offering a FYS throughout the University, students transferring to a new college may find that a required course that is also a FYS must still be taken.

*The use of these two substitutions (No. 2 and No. 3 above), either alone or in combination, may not lead to the complete elimination of any area in the skills or knowledge domains categories in the student’s general education program.
THE ASSOCIATE DEGREE GENERAL EDUCATION PROGRAM

The associate degree General Education program consists of 21 credits that are distributed among two General Education components:

1. (1) Skills: 6 credits in courses that develop communicative and quantitative skills; and
2. (2) Knowledge Domains: 12 credits in the Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, and Social and Behavioral Sciences, with an additional 3 credits in any General Education area.

Associate degree students have a 3-credit requirement and may choose either a United States Cultures (US) course or an International Cultures (IL) course, and must complete a 3-credit writing intensive course (W). While associate degree students are not required to complete a First-Year Seminar, they are encouraged to participate in such a seminar if the opportunity to do so exists.

A restriction is placed on students in majors that are closely linked to the Knowledge Domains areas of Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, and Social and Behavioral Sciences, in order to ensure that they participate in the full breadth of General Education. These students may not use a course in their academic major to satisfy one of the Knowledge Domains area requirements. For example, an Economics major may not use an economics course to fulfill his/her social and behavioral sciences requirement.

Flexibility of the Associate Degree General Education Requirements

The General Education program extends the concept of flexibility to all aspects of the degree program. Penn State wants students to use General Education as an opportunity to experiment and explore, to take academic risks, to discover things they did not know before, and to learn to do things they have not done before.

To these ends, students may, with the permission of their adviser and dean’s representative:

1. Substitute a 200- to 499-level course for an Arts, Humanities, Natural Sciences, or Social and Behavioral Sciences course found on the General Education list. For example, a student may take a 400-level course in history and use it to meet the General Education requirement satisfied by a comparable lower level history course.
2. Meet the United States Cultures (US) and International Cultures (IL) requirement through completion of an...
experiential learning program or practicum (one-semester or year long) approved by their college dean's Office. Approved Penn State Education Abroad Programs may be used to satisfy the International Cultures (IL) requirement.

3. Three credits of the required 21 credits of General Education courses are to be selected from any of the following General Education areas: Writing/Speaking, Quantification, Natural Sciences, Arts, Humanities, or Social and Behavioral Sciences.

GENERAL EDUCATION COURSE DESIGNATIONS

Courses that appear in this bulletin with the following designations have been approved for General Education. See http://bulletins.psu.edu/bulletins/bluebook/general_education.cfm for further information.

- Skills Courses
  - Writing/Speaking — GWS
  - Quantification — GQ
- Knowledge Domains Courses
  - Health and Physical Activity — GHA (formerly Health Sciences--GHS and Physical Education--GPE)
  - Natural Sciences — GN
  - Arts — GA
  - Humanities--GH
  - Social and Behavioral Sciences — GS

DESIGNATIONS FOR ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS

In addition to the General Education degree requirements, every baccalaureate degree student will also complete the United State Cultures (US) and International Cultures (IL), Writing Across the Curriculum (M, W, Y, and X), and First-Year Seminar (S, T, X, or PSU designation) requirements.
Courses that appear in this bulletin with an H, M, or T suffix following the course number are identified as honors courses. University Scholars Program students may participate in honors courses. In addition, any University Senate approved course may be offered with the honors suffix identification with the approval of the University Scholars Program. The honors identification will be entered on the student’s transcript.

CREDITS AND HOURS

Credits are awarded on the semester-hour basis. According to Senate Policy 42-23, a total of at least forty hours of work planned and arranged by the University faculty is required for the average student to gain 1 credit. While the distribution of time varies from course to course, generally one-third of the time is devoted to formal instruction, such as lecture, recitation, laboratory, field trips, etc., and two-thirds of the time to outside preparation.

Credits, classroom work, and practicum work

The number of credits for each course is indicated in parentheses and can be earned with classroom, practicum, or laboratory work as designated in the Schedule of Courses, accessible through the Registrar’s home page at www.psu.edu/registrar.

A typical period is fifty minutes.

A department may schedule an entire section in an undergraduate course for fewer credits than the maximum authorized. In 400-level courses, a department may schedule an individual student for fewer credits than the maximum authorized. In no case, however, may the course be scheduled for 0 credit, or may the total credits scheduled for any student exceed the maximum number authorized for the course.

Courses that may be repeated and variable credit courses

If a course may be repeated, the words “per semester” follow the number of credits—for example (3 credits per semester). These courses may be repeated indefinitely unless the credits are followed by the maximum number of credits allowed, such as (3 per semester, maximum of 12).

Courses may have variable credits, such as (1-3), (2-6), or (3-10). Here, the larger number signifies the total credits that can be accumulated for the course over an indefinite number of semesters, unless otherwise specified. For example, a course listed with (1-6) could be taken six semesters for 1 credit each semester, or two semesters for 3 credits each semester, or once for 6 credits, etc.

In some courses with variable credits, students may be permitted to accumulate more than the larger number shown. Such courses will be listed as, for example, (1-3 per semester, maximum of 12).

Any special departmental limitations are indicated by footnotes.

PREREQUISITE AND CONCURRENT COURSES

Prerequisites are approximations of the necessary prior specific or general academic knowledge, background, or semester standing required in order to succeed academically in a specific course. Concurrent courses are to be taken in the same semester. The course instructor has the right to limit the students in the course to those who have the stated prerequisites. If this limitation is exercised, it must occur before the end of the course add period.
