

PSYCHOLOGY OF TEAM LEADERSHIP GRADUATE CREDIT CERTIFICATE PROGRAM

Person-in-Charge	Barbara Watters
Program Code	PSYTL
Campus(es)	World Campus

Psychology of Team Leadership Graduate Certificate: 9 credits

The Psychology of Innovation Leadership graduate certificate will help students learn the skills needed to motivate and empower others in organizational settings. Students also will learn how to be effective leaders of or members of teams that can collaborate to achieve common goals. Lastly, students will learn how to make sound decisions about organizational problems with confidence and without bias.

This certificate was designed for anyone who wishes to earn a credential that could be applied toward the MPS in Psychology of Leadership in the future. The certificate also would provide a firm foundation with which to enter other programs with a leadership emphasis. It is intended for those early in their careers who wish to become more effective team members; and be competitive for promotions into leadership roles in the future.

It also is intended for those early or midway in their careers who are in leadership roles and aspire to advance further; and are in leadership development, organizational effectiveness, or human resources roles that work directly with leaders and teams.