The Master of Arts in Clinical Psychology program helps students prepare to work as mental health professionals in a variety of settings and is intended to provide a broad training program in empirically validated clinical psychology. The program can provide the academic training necessary for graduates to apply for master's level licensing as a professional counselor in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and is flexible enough to prepare graduates for licensure in many other U.S. states. The M.A. program requires 60 credits of course work.

The overall model emphasizes the scientific bases of behavior, including biological, social, and individual difference factors. This scientist-practitioner training model is health-oriented rather than pathology-oriented and emphasizes the development of helping skills, including both assessment and intervention.

The degree program is intended for both part- and full-time students. Students are admitted fall semester only. The deadline for applications is April 30.
