Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the Organizational and Professional Communication program, students will be able to:

• Describe the significance of communication in everyday experience and as a distinctive intellectual paradigm;
• Apply, critique, and extend communication concepts, principles, theories, and perspectives to a variety of organizational contexts;
• Plan communication inquiry, including humanistic or social scientific approaches;
• Apply quantitative and qualitative research methods to organizational and professional contexts;
• Demonstrate logical, critical, creative, and ethical thinking about communication for decision-making and problem-solving;
• Generate and perform messages appropriate to their audience, purpose, and context;
• Locate, synthesize, and assimilate new information from a variety of sources and use it to inform communication analysis and practice within organizations;
• Engage diverse communities, both local and global, and function as a member of a deliberative society;
• Facilitate groups communication and functions in and out of organizations;
• Apply principles of leadership to interpersonal and group situations;
• Demonstrate critical and ethical understanding of conflict in interpersonal, group, and organizational settings;
• Reflect on professional experience and situate that experience within college-level learning.